AMERICAN LOGISTICS

For a bunch of rank amateurs, the American Service of Supply has shown a pretty grasp of that least known of the military sciences called "logistics."

Early Nazi successes resulted as much from skilful application of logistics as from the weight of planes, tanks and guns. The Japs, under different circumstances, used logistics in a strictly professional manner, to our great detriment. Weapons are of use only where the weight is being fought.

But neither of these ever carried out a major amphibious attack, which is by far the most difficult type of war, with more certainty and precision and success than did the Americans when they moved in on North Africa.

Logistics is the science of transporting, equipping and supplying troops. There was nothing when it was relatively unimportant. But not today. It would be mass murder under modern conditions to move troops against an established enemy unless with them they had the necessary weapons, munitions and other supplies, plus replacements and repair parts and facilities. Converting simultaneously upon various widely separated beachheads in Africa came men and material from Britain and from the United States. Their movements were so carefully correlated that no detachment had to fight without possessing every weapon assigned to it.

And ever since the initial blow, the service of supply has kept men, armaments, munitions and other supplies flowing in a constant stream, notwithstanding the inherent difficulties plus every hindrance the axis commanders could bring to bear. The achievement is the more remarkable because it was the first real test of our leadership, was done without opportunity for such practice, and because it involved movement of a million gallons rather than anything the Nazis ever have attempted.

Behind General Lee, as head of the entire service of supply, stands Gen. George B. Brown. B. Somervell, whose rise in rank has been probably the most phenomenal in U. S. military history. A lieutenant-colonel when the war began, he still is only a colonel in permanent rank. Yet he is supervising one of the most tremendous jobs ever attempted by any soldier of any rank, and supervising it exceedingly well.

To General Somervell, to General Lee, and to their subordinates our admiration goes as secretly as to Generals Eisenhower and Clark. Theirs is the task that has fallen to the most spectacular but not one whit more important place in the North African war.

DON'T SPREAD RUMORS

Rumors under any circumstance can cause a lot of trouble, but in time of war they are particularly vicious.

Idle gossip that serves to besmirch any individual may seem inoffensive at the time and without evil intent, but after it has been repeated and embellished, there is no telling what may be the outcome.

During the past year, the wartime involved in the war, we have all heard dozens of rumors of one description or another. Usually they pertain to different phases of the war effort and quite often they are taken for granted without investigation of any kind.

Now that the far-reaching rationing program is getting under way, everyone should be on his guard against the many rumors that are bound to start making the rounds.

Don't take any of these rumors for granted. Avoid them, before drawing any conclusions. If you know of any rumors, report them to proper authorities for investigation. But, as your government has warned you, don't make a practice of spreading rumors, because such gossip is not only injurious to our war-time spirit, but is playing into enemy hands as well.

As one Washington newspaper correspondent recently pointed out:

"It is really amazing how much hell one rumor-monger can raise when he starts out to make a nuisance of himself."

If you want to help your country win this war, don't win your hands in anticipation the next time some one comes to you with a "morsel that's juicy." Challenge him to prove his statements, instead. And if he can't prove them, give them the lecture he deserves for spreading such rumors.

TUCKER'S NATIONAL WHIRLWIG

OPPOSED—One of the most spectacular examples of confusion and conflict in Washington is the handling of the fuel and oil problem. The Petroleum Coordinator's refusal to construct a pipeline authorized by congress and approved by the President, and the subsequent refusal to the charge that powerful oil magnates control the whole program.

A million dollar duct from Tulsa, Okla., to Savannah and Charleston, with provision for shipping refined surplus oil to northern ports was delayed at the request of the navy and certain high army officials. Becardine, the Petroleum Coordinator, the secretary of the Interior stubbornly declines to go to the aid of the Petroleum Coordinator, the secretary of the Interior public lands committee has condemned and questioned the accuracy of the engineering figures on which he bases his do-nothing policy. South Carolina members charge that the Chicago is dominated by the big oil companies that do not want their Mississippi gulf train broken up.

Although the proposed extension would carry 70,000 barrels of crude to the coast every 24 hours, it is opposed by former top men of the industry now serving as dollar-a-year advisers to the Interior and War Departments—Ralph K. Davies and Rich. Gen. Walter Byrum, respectively. The first mentioned was a member of California Standards before he came to the capital and the other had an executive job with Gulf.

SHOWDOWN—Numerous interested principals attribute the Jackson recalcitrance to his ancient enmity toward Lawrence Wood ("Chip") Roberts, Atlanta engineer and secretary of the Democratic National Committee during the Farley regime. The cabinet member suspected that his old foe was hidden in the Washington trench when he learned that the Alabama Walker Chip brother-in-law and a pipeline executive, was angling for the right to construct and operate the whirling Tinsley-Savannah conduit.

But Mr. Jackson does not know that the two men barely speak of a quarrel involving competing requests for the same right. It seems that Mr. Roberts agrees to go to build another proposed line from Tulsa to the Standard Oil's Baton Rouge refinery. When Mr. Walker learned of this rival enterprise, he protested to his relative. According to Aldrich, B. O. is buying the Mississippi output at approximately 50 cents a barrel, while paying 40 for similar quantities of oil pumped hundreds of miles farther west. He maintained that Standard wanted the Baton Rouge output at a price that would have excluded the Alabama product, thereby have Mississippi producers at its mercy.

When Chip decided to go ahead anyway, his participation was reported to Mr. Jackson. He had several battles with the Atlanta architect in P. W. A. days, declared that he would be "damned" if he would approve any undertaking which he considered to have any connection. But he blue-penciled that proposal, too.

This squabbling explains why Minority House Leader Joseph M. Martin summoned a protest meeting of New Englanders, including Democrats as well as Republicans.

ADVANTAGES—Mr. Roosevelt may set up a two-man agency to prevent the future military and economic experts to consult with one another, as before the North African expedition. As revealed exclusively in this column, the war strategists' official attitude regarding that campaign will result in far more dramatic rationing of every daily necessity than the one in effect. The war strategists' official attitude regarding that campaign will result in far more dramatic rationing of every daily necessity than the one in effect.

Economic Stabilizer James F. Byrnes and Admiral William D. Leahy are the men mentioned as prospective coordinators. In making decisions affecting production of goods and services, the war strategists' official attitude regarding that campaign will result in far more dramatic rationing of every daily necessity than the one in effect.

Establishment of a small joint command as described above postulates one great advantage. This is that the two men, who are the most powerful in the United States, will be less likely to be bludgeoned by the industrialists anxious to give an impression of their own importance.

BLACKOUT—Avenues of approach to overseas news will be closed by an order not to allow publicity by the office of war information.

The Davis organization has given notice that it is withdrawing from the war effort. This means that the Davis organization has given notice that it is withdrawing from the war effort.

Since the paid publicity men must issue handouts to the press, it is likely that the Davis organization will be a blackout of all information. Oddly, the Davis organization will be a blackout of all information.

There is a lack of only a few weeks after the people are asked to give up their rationing. The Davis organization will be a blackout of all information.

DARLAN, PETAIN MOVES AID U. S.

By LOUIS F. KEMBLE
Of the United Press War Desk

Allied "expeditions" in accordance with the services of Admiral Jean-François Darlan in Africa appears more than justified in the light of today's dispatch from John A. Harris, United Press correspondent just returned to London by air from Africa. Darlan, it appears, is in accord with Marshal Henri Philippe Petain and between them they hold the confidence of the French people. Their leadership on behalf of the United Nations would defeat the influence of such traitors as Laval, Darlan and Dorel and would end the "collaboration."

First Contribution
Darlan already has made a valuable contribution to the allied cause by bringing French West Africa into the camp of freedom. The latest news from London leaves no doubt that he has done so. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told commonsense that discussions are under way with the French for the use of West African facilities and ports, including Dakar.

Dakar is an acquisition of great importance. Not only is it the strategic point to the South American continent, but it is invaluable as a base from which to combat the next summer's invasion.

This message is very real. Prime Minister Winston Churchill pointed out on Sunday that it is growing instead of diminishing and is likely to become worse before it is overcome.

Chief Remaining Weapon

Allied leaders have not forgotten that Germany aimed with the last war with submarines. The fact now is that the submarine is Germany's chief remaining weapon. The effort has been outstripped in air strength and is due to fall further behind.

Without superiority in the air, Germany cannot invade England. Her land forces are immobilized in Russia and in various parts of the European continent. The remaining hope is the submarine, with which to choke the allied supply line.

The big British-American expeditionary force in North Africa is dependent on the Atlantic route for supplies. The British are not announcing shipping losses and the extent of enemy submarine activity is not known.

Abandon U. S. Campaign

There is reason to believe, however, that the Germans have concentrated their undersea activity off Africa, and have virtually abandoned their campaign off the north Atlantic coast.

With a heavy concentration of submarines, of which Germany has several hundred—perhaps three times as many as in the last war—the maels are capable of working havoc on two main allied supply lines.

One is the line from the United States to west and north Africa. It is essential to the Mediterranean campaign which is destined to be a prelude to the invasion of Europe from the south.

The other is the "life line" around the cape of Good Hope which supplies the middle east, India, and Russia.

Possession of Dakar would help the allies greatly in combating this menace.

Blackfoot Mayor Resigns Position

BLACKFOOT, Dec. 2 (AP)—Resignation of Mayor Merrill C. Boyle, 28, was accepted at the city council meeting of the city council but no action was taken to name a new mayor.

Earl C. Miller, president of the council and a member of that body for the past four terms, will serve as mayor pro-tem.

Under Boyle's administration, the city filled out women's rooms in the city hall and inaugurated an extensive street cleaning program this year, both of which were widespread praise throughout the city and Blingham county. It was Boyle's first public office.

Boyle left for California last week-end.

MAJOR LEAGUES PICK PHILADELPHIA FOR ALL-STAR GAME

Phil's Plight Still No. 1 Loop Problem

By JUDSON BAILY

CHICAGO, Dec. 2 (AP)—The major league baseball season for Philadelphia ended last night with the Phillies' 1-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the first game of a double-header at the Civic Center stadium.

The all-star game will be played again for the first time since 1939, when the American League home team, the Yankees, defeated the National League team, the Cincinnati Reds, 4-3.

The game will be played at a joint meeting to be held over the weekend of Dec. 10-11 at the Philadelphia Civic Center.

The Sports Round-up

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (AP)—When the happy day in Boston when Holy Cross defeated Boston College that kicking Saturday was won... As long as it kept winning on Saturday, Holy Cross couldn't get a tackle for their Sunday night victory. But one figure the papers will give him some space... First word trickling in from the Chicago front is that the Chicago Bears have lost to the Cleveland Browns 14-0. The Bears were out of the game in the first quarter and did not come back and the referee awarded Bobo a knockout at 2:40 of the initial round. Bobo weighed 211, Lane came in at 191.

Edward Clarke, husky Cincinnati Negro light heavyweight, defeated his second victim over Joey Maxin, Cleveland, in another of the three 10-rounders leading the card.

The 21-year-old Charles, who spotted his rival 18 pounds, knocked Maxin down after the fifth and had the crowd in a frenzy in the final two rounds as he tried for the kill. Charles weighed 166, Maxin 184.

College Grid Attendance Shows Drop

BY ORLO ROBERTSON
NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (AP)—College football attendance in the first half of the season showed a decline in recent years of every region of the country failed to match 1941's high figure.

A study of the home attendance of 42 of the nation's leading gridiron schools showed an average decrease of nearly 10 percent from last year, when the attendance was four percent over 1940. The west coast, only section of the country to show a drop last year, led the 1942 decline with a falling off of nearly 20 percent.

North to the west coast came the midwest with a decrease of 21 percent. The southwest was off 23 percent, the south 20 percent, and the Rocky Mountain region 19 percent.

The midwest was the only section to come close to last year's figures and it was down 75 percent.

1,025,500 New Games
The 419 home games tabulated by the Associated Press showed an attendance of 7,025,500 as compared to 6,637,800 for 42 contests in 1941. Various reasons were given for the decline, including the usual one of less favorable conditions. The biggest factor was the war. For example, it was responsible for a 10,000 drop in attendance at the game of the 1942 game was with Georgia Tech. Georgia Tech's perfect record spoiled by Holy Cross, had a good year with 15,150 witnessing the game. Georgia Tech's 15,150 is one more last season.

Gains in Midwest
In the midwest, Wisconsin, Ohio State, Marquette, Iowa, Purdue, Notre Dame and Illinois all showed gains over 1941 but with the exception of Marquette all played more games on their home fields. Marquette, a member of home games, showed the big jump in the south, while Texas, playing the same number of home games, was the lone southwest institution to show an increase. Utah led the same of the three schools reporting from the Rocky Mountain area.

Southern California, annually the attendance leader on the Pacific coast, pulled in 240,000 in five games but the Trojans have completed their schedule and if the expected 103,000 turn out for the UCLA game on Dec. 12, their attendance will not be far off last year's 320,000. Up to the present, the best crowd, 8,000, saw Notre Dame beat U.S.C. at Los Angeles last Saturday.

Ruffing Works in Aircraft Plant

DOWNEY, Calif., Dec. 2 (AP)—Charles "Red" Ruffing, 31, star pitcher of the New York Yankees, is working in the Vultee aircraft plant here, installing gaskets on Consolidated Liberator bombers.

Working on the assembly line, Ruffing said his usual winter layoff on the golf course wasn't likely to build fighting machines so he signed up as a "trainer" at the aviation factory.

He said he doubted there would be any major league baseball next year but added "if there is the Yankee league this year—just that the Yankees will, sink in the Argentine—of course."

Ted Williams Gets Thrill Out of Navy

AMHERST, Mass., Dec. 2 (AP)—After completing the first quarter of his right-wing course as a civil pilot trainee at the Naval Air Station at Amesbury, Ted Williams, the major league's (impenetrable) and off-balance batting champion, said he was willing to give up baseball for a naval aviator's career.

Williams, training at Amesbury college with 20 other U.S. navy V-5 cadets, including Johnny Peck, his Boston Red Sox teammate, John Sain and Buddy Gump, both of the Boston Braves, and Joe Coleman, the Philadelphia Athletics' pitching rookie, has impressed his instructors and classmates alike with his determination to be in the navy wings.

Willie Mosconi Lead Nation's Billiard Stars

DETROIT, Dec. 2 (AP)—Once the world's clearest pool shot, the veteran Ralph Greenleaf of New York is having trouble making the balls between but he had a chance today to show the world his pocket. Billiard's tournament was open.

Greenleaf, below form in recent times, won the title of 11 times, met Willie Mosconi of Jackson, Mich., in one of today's five matches. Mosconi, with three straight victories, was leading the journey as the only undefeated contender.

Showing a flash of his old style, Greenleaf indulged in a high run of 123 yesterday. He was in the Jimenez Caras of Philadelphia, 12 to 52 in seven frames. It was Greenleaf's first victory.

"35 won't hurt your car if you're careful at 60 miles an hour..."

A doctor and another customer of mine could even get a new car by U. S. regulations. But they're careful with the car they've got, doing under 35, same as other people in wartime. I say that's the spirit.

"I can do some of my part along the same line, by telling you why this 35-mile top is bound to make you car last even longer yet, if you don't hunt up grief at 60 miles an hour!

"That's no wisecrack—60 miles an hour. It's when your car is standing still and your engine is starting cold, needing lubrication the worst of ever. So I don't just change your oil. I change you to an OIL-PLATING engine with my Conoco N4 motor oil for Winter. Nothing special to do or pay, but Conoco N4 attaches OIL-PLATING all over your engine's insides as close as plating in a furnace. Sort of 'magnesium' makes N4 oil keep the OIL-PLATING from all draining down to the crankcase overnight, and all day, etc. Sooner than you're even in the car, OIL-PLATING is up to where you need it—instead of taking time getting through skinny holes and slits. You've had lots of people's word-

Shortage Looms For Yule Trees

BOISE, Dec. 2 (AP) — Only one permit has been sought to cut Christmas trees on either the Payette, or Boise national forest preserve, forest service officials said.

As a result, a possible shortage of Christmas trees was predicted officially.

SERIAL STORY

THE EDGE OF DARKNESS

BY WILLIAM WOODS

THE STORY: Karl Fischer, in love with Karen Stengard, stands guard impatiently, dreaming of better days to come. At the hotel, meanwhile, Karl is recruited by Katja, a Polish actress he met in Warsaw. Will she betray him?

THE STOLEN GUN

CHAPTER XIII

"I don't know what to do," the girl said. "They... they led to me..."

"I told them I was an actress. They thought that before I could act in the Berlin State Theater I would have to prove my loyalty. They made me come to Warsaw."

"But what do you want me to do about it?"

"I don't know, looking up at him with wide and pleading eyes. Please don't say no to me."

"You are sure you were here and were preparing to be a high officer... make you could talk to the captain and get him to join me."

Gently he put her hands away, got up and went to the window. The morning lay warm and still in midwinter sunlight. Here and there beneath the trees a few red and yellow leaves still swayed down the small steps. "What a beautiful day," he thought. "I've never seen this city before. I know what you mean, on down in the village."

"You are afraid," he said. "I don't know."

"Have the soldiers been unkind to you?"

"No, but it is coming that made you afraid?"

"Oh, please stop asking me!" She came up behind him and clasped him about the shoulders, pressing her cheek to the back of his head. "I'm sure," she cried. "I hate them. I can't stand being with them any longer. You must help me."

"You will have to help yourself. At last he turned. He saw her still, that small girl under the park, in the beautiful Lazienki Gardens, with an officer beside her. "I know your trouble," he said. "It is a bad conscience. Do you want me to tell you the truth? You will never play in the State Theater here, and in your heart you know it. Nobody needs you. There are many actresses with far more talent. The Germans you loved so much have made a fool of you."

The tears started to her eyes. A pity word in him for her beautiful, unbroken, but a pain for these warm, sweet days when schoolmasters sat at their desks and this role in the Lazienki Gardens.

She mistook his silence, lifted her head slowly and began to smile with a new interest about her mouth. "I could go to school," she said. "You know that. That's all I would need. Oh, yes, you think you can treat me as you please. You think..."

"What would you gain?"

"She saw that his eyes were moving her."

"I could go down to the captain," she said in a louder voice. "Oh, my poor foolishness. My poor, crazy foolishness."

"Katja. His eyes grew hard and unforgiving, and he stared forward and took her by the wrist. She cried out in surprise at the pain of his grip. "You fool," he said. "You could help us all, instead of talking such chatter."

"You think so," she cried fiercely. "But it's too late."

"You wanted me to tell you what to do."

"I don't need your advice."

He dropped his hand, and she started toward the door.

Status Andersen started forward, but a burly trooper standing on the porch landing crossed his long, hooded legs in front of him, blocking the steps.

"Would you be so kind," said Status, and tapped the man's boots with his stick. The soldier started to laugh, but then he realized that the old man was staring at him strangely.

"Well, what's wrong?" he asked. "Nothing. Nothing," Status said slowly, but his eyebrows were slanting, were they not?

The soldier flushed and then scrambled up. "What do you mean by that?" he burst out. "What makes you say so?"

"High, receding forehead and flat-topped skull," Status unceremoniously was saying every word distinctly. "Next time you look in the mirror you will find you are a bit different from your comrades." And with that, and a little nod to either side, he stepped past and vanished into the hotel.

"The Polish girl lay on her bed, staring with wide and frightened eyes at the ceiling. She had been crying. But now everything was still.

Katja was waiting between two clovers. One was to help the people in the village as Status had asked her to do. But that would take courage. The other was to lead her own life and try to get back to what she had always wanted. That second choice, so much the easier, had been attracted by the eye, recurring hope that they would send her back to the continent.

She had come slowly to believe that it was really true, that there was no hope. And discovering at the same time that there was no real life for her in joining a fight of which she knew she could never be a part, she realized there was only one path left.

Katja knew suddenly what she must do. And yet, full of self-pity, his brow became awkward, as if before he finished he intended to become serious.
